HOUGHTON'S 1927 ALL-AMERICAN DAHLIA HANDICAP

(Present Day "Race Horses" of the Dahlia World)

FOREWORD

With one or two exceptions all Dahlias on the market today are what are known as Hybrids. That is they are the result of evolution by cross breeding from the original Dahlia, which incidentally was a single type, open centered wild flower, native to Mexico.

Marvelous results have been obtained from this continued experiment until the Dahlias which we now possess are entirely worthy of a place in the front rank of garden flowers. During the course of this development there were created or produced certain outstanding individual specimens, either of a varying type or of marked beauty and vigor of the same type. These outstanding varieties, because of their new or superlative qualities have either endured or been used in breeding up the strain to a still higher standard, until we have today a flower which it would seem approaches perfection. Absolute perfection, of course, has never been and probably never will be reached, for as it is approached, the standard automatically rises.

In the course of this evolution many new varieties have been created which have not been of sufficient merit to warrant their being either continued or offered for sale. Unfortunately, however, many of these have been allowed to "get by." At the present writing we have confronting us a most confusing array of some ten thousand named and listed Dahlias of various types and colors. It is our personal opinion that not over five per cent of this number are worthy of consideration in the light of the present day standard of perfection, and so, primarily for the benefit of those who have not the time nor opportunity for finding out the actual facts regarding these myriad different sorts, we prepare each year a list of some two hundred which we personally believe worthy of your consideration. This list is made without the slightest intentional partiality toward any individual grower or group of growers, and takes in varieties originating in many different and widely separated sections of the country. It does not of course include all the good ones, and should therefore not be construed in any sense as a Dahlia "Bible." We could name perhaps two or three hundred more varieties, which would probably prove quite as satisfactory as many of these, but a longer list would be cumbersome and more or less confusing and so for this year at least we have set our limit at two hundred names. By the time you have tried all these out you will know enough about Dahlias to enable you to pick your own selections.

Yours very truly,
EARLE W. HOUGHTON.

Note: In case you are not personally familiar with reliable sources of supply of any of these varieties, we can—subject to prior sale—secure for you guaranteed, original or native root stock at the prices indicated. When we say guaranteed we mean that the stock is warranted to be true to name and to reach you in good growing condition—otherwise replacement will be made, or in the event of this being impossible your money, to the amount paid for the variety or varieties found unsatisfactory, will be refunded.
